ABOUT US

A French Guiana-based company, Nature Amazonie was born in 2010 from Enite Gérard's desire to use her heritage and create a range of cosmetics inspired from native traditional recipes and remedies. All products are carefully formulated in local laboratories with 100% natural, vegan, fair-trade ingredients, for modern women wishing to reduce their exposure to chemicals found in regular beauty products.

Located in South America, on the Atlantic littoral, just north of Brazil, French Guiana is a tropical gem that flourishes on the edge of the Amazonian rain-forest. This French Territory has developed its own culture, inherited from centuries of know-how and rituals, which includes traditional, unconventional medicine and natural remedies using indigenous fruits and nuts.

At Nature Amazonie, we only work with nearby, 100% natural resources, and we only source our raw material from co-op harvesters. Fruits and nuts are harvested in the forest, and transformed immediately to ensure the best conservation. For years, Enite Gérard has worked with chemists to develop unique formulas and to ensure that plants and fruits' provenienciency over centuries can be used to their greatest benefit.

The Amazonian rainforest remains one of the most mysterious areas of our planet; its unique biodiversity is still being slowly uncovered by the scientific community. Discover all the Amazonian women's beauty secrets!

BACURI

Bacuri grows as a bunch and looks like a papaya. Its thick skin hides a soft white flesh with a high concentration of tripalmitin and palmitoleic fatty acid. Known to efficiently awaken and hydrate fatigued, dull or stained skins, Amazonian women use it to treat acne and pimples.

CARAPA

Traditionally used for its anti-inflammatory and moisturizing properties, carapa oil is produced from the seeds of the carapa fruit. High in olein, and palmitin, women use it to moisturize their skin and give it a soft touch. They also use it to prevent bruises, and to repel hematophaegous insects (mosquitos, ticks...) or soothe itchy bites.

CUPUAÇU

A cousin to cacao, this tough coconut-alike exterior hides a cottony immaculate flesh, and big seeds. With high water absorption properties, this fruit helps in hydrating the skin naturally and deeply. Its scent is often described as a mix of cacao

MARACUJA

Maracuja is the exotic name of the passion fruit. Highly concentrated in fatty acid and omega 6, it is used by women to moisturize and relax their skin or leave their hair light and glossy, while perfuming it with its soft, exotic scent.

PRACAXI

This big almond-looking nut produces an oil renowned for its healing and regenerating properties. It is indeed composed mostly of oleic, linoleic and behenic acids, all three known to accelerate the healing of skin lesions. In Amazonia, it is used to reduce pregnancy-induced stretch marks, scars, or aging spots.

MURU-MURU

The seeds of the murumuru fruit produce a butter rich in lauric, myristic and oleic acid. Often used in soaps, it leaves a protection layer on the skin similar to silicone, but does not clog the pores; it is also an excellent treatment for dry and tired skins. In hair products, murumuru butter helps maintain curls, while nourishing and hydrates and relaxes the skin, soothes the mind. This oil helps restore the surface layer of the skin. Used in the hair, it makes it lighter and shinier.

MARACUJA OIL

PRACAXI OIL

With a light hazelnut scent, this oil has healing and moisturizing properties; it is used by Amazonians to heal the skin in case of stretch marks, scars or stains.

soaps

CUPUAÇU SOAP

With its natural moisturizing agents, this soap bar reinforces the skin's natural elasticity and cleanses it deeply. It also makes the skin soft and smooth without drying it.

PRACAXI SOAP

A bar soap that hydrates the skin; Amazonians use it to help reducing pregnancy-related stretch marks, stains and skin imperfections

EXFOLIATING CARAPA SOAP

Made with carapa oil, this soap bar comes in a 100% natural loofa envelop, and offers a complete, natural cleaning ritual with a double action: while the loofa allows a deep face and body peeling to eliminate dead cells, the soap bar hydrates the skin and purifies the pores.

All our products are 100% natural; the only preservatives we use are natural essential oils.

body care

CUPUAÇU & CARAPA BODY BUTTER

Combining the moisturizing properties of cupuaçu and the skin softening properties of carapa, this butter nourishes and moisturizes the skin ; Amazonians use it to prevent cellulitis.

BACURI BUTTER

This butter hydrates deeply the skin. Bacuri is used by Amazonians to fight acne and pimples.

skin care

REVITALIZING BUTTER

Mixing cupuaçu, bacuri and buriti, this butter prevents the skin from aging prematurely due to long term sun exposure, by stimulating collagen production, thus skin elasticity.

HYDRATING MASK

Made with white clay, pracaxi and Brazil nut oils, this mask can be used as a complement to the peeling. It purifies, deeply nourishes the skin and absorbs the excess of sebum.

PEELING CREAM

Enriched with wild rose powder, this peeling cleanses the skin thoroughly and activates skin microcirculation. The combination of muru-muru butter and maracuja oil leaves the skin moisturized and lightly scented.
